A New Bent.

Neither the old Democratic nor the old Whig parties ever won a victory by the abandonment of a principle; and the present Democratic party, which is composed of them both, will not even know how so far to "depart" from their old ways of honesty as to do it. We need a general and mutual understanding, and this we cannot have too soon. A Kentucky cotemporary makes the following very proper appeal; It is high time the honest, intelligent Democrats put forward men of honesty and intelligence at the head of the party. Let the old Democratic party arouse from its lethargy, and take off these barnacles and give need to the counsels of the believing Democrats, who have stood by their rinciples through evil report and good report. Let the time-henored doctrines of the party be re-asserted and a complete and thorough organextion of the party be effected upon platform containing the essence of cound Democracy, as taught by Jef ferson and Madison, and declaring our | West Vi undying hostility to the doctrine and teachings of the party in power which has rendered lesef infamous through all time, by the crimes and usurpations it has perpetrated.
